

COLUMBIA NEIGHBORS

B U L L E T I N

Harlem School of the Arts President James C. Horton.

COMMUNITY UPDATES

A Conversation with Harlem School of the Arts President

Harlem School of the Arts (HSA), a grantee of Columbia Community Service, is a pillar of the Harlem community with a roster of alumni who've gone on to shape and influence their respective fields. Nearly six decades after its creation, HSA's seventh president, Chicago native James C. Horton, is carrying the legacy of founder Dorothy Maynor's mission forward while ushering the beloved institution into a new era.

HSA's 60th anniversary is approaching, and Horton is looking forward to fortifying the institution's foundation to make way for new initiatives. For HSA, this means cultivating new areas of opportunity in the digital and carceral environments, working with city agencies, collaborating with elders in the community to tell their stories, and so much more. Alongside new initiatives, Horton is excited to reinvigorate HSA's past programming, which has uplifted artists in the neighborhood since the institution's founding.

Read more of our conversation with Horton on HSA's legacy, his personal journey to a career in the arts, and what's on the horizon for the institution at neighbors.columbia.edu/hsa-horton.

It's Here! Manhattanville Community Day Is on October 21

Join us on the Manhattanville campus on Saturday, October 21, for a free fun-filled celebration of community!

Immerse yourself in creative workshops with the Wallach Art Gallery. Enjoy exciting feature film screenings at the Lenfest Center for the Arts and The Forum. Indulge in Uptown cuisine with flavorful food samples from local vendors. Dance to the mixes of local legend DJ Stormin' Norman. Learn about resources available at Columbia. Bring your family to explore the workings of the brain during Saturday Science—plus so much more.

We invite our neighbors surrounding Columbia's campuses in Morningside Heights, West Harlem, Harlem, and Washington Heights as well as Columbia affiliates to share in this day of celebration. Register at neighbors.columbia.edu/communitydayfall23.

Manhattanville Community Day. Photo credit: April Renae

COMMUNITY EVENTS

Northern Manhattan Neighbors Appreciation Day

October 7, 12:30 - 3:00 pm

Get free tickets to watch the Columbia Football vs. Marist game. Open to all residents of Inwood, Washington Heights, and Harlem.

neighbors.columbia.edu/nm-day

Lamont-Doherty Open House

October 14,
10:00 am - 4:00 pm

A day of free kids activities at Columbia's campus in the Palisades. Free shuttles are available from Morningside and Rockleigh, New Jersey.

neighbors.columbia.edu/ld-23

Pop-Up Concert: Vicky Chow

October 24,
6:00 pm

Vicky Chow, one of our era's most brilliant pianists, will return to the Miller Theatre's stage with a solo performance of eclectic contemporary works.

neighbors.columbia.edu/miller-vicky

"On Horror" Lecture at Lenfest Center of the Arts

October 26,
6:30 - 8:00 pm

A lecture with Columbia writing professors, Dorothea Lasky and Victor LaValle, discussing their recent works, including the Apple TV+ adaptation of "The Changeling."

neighbors.columbia.edu/on-horror