As part of Columbia’s commitment to provide equal or better affordable housing for residents of two buildings within the Manhattanville Campus expansion area that are part of the city’s Tenant-in-Lease (TIL) program, the University constructed a new 12-story building at Broadway and West 148th Street. The building was built to Enterprise Green Communities guidelines, in support of both community health and the University’s Sustainability Plan. All units in the building have roof deck access, bicycle storage, meeting space, and laundry areas. The landscaped roof terraces provide residents with panoramic views of the Hudson River, the Manhattan skyline, and the George Washington Bridge. In addition to the apartment units, the Meeting with God Church has a new sanctuary, office, and educational

Construction of the building located at 3595 Broadway was completed in early 2016. Construction updates were made available to the public for the duration of construction from October 2012 through January 2016.

In December 2021, Columbia University Facilities and Operations developed a new website for design and construction projects. Construction updates for past construction projects were not transferred over to this new site, but have been archived and are available upon request.
A LONG JOURNEY TO OWNERSHIP NEARS ITS GOAL
Residents being displaced by Columbia will buy affordable homes built by the university

Ms. Muentes and her friend Luisa Henriquez were part of a community of 20 neighbors who lived together in a century-old, six-story walk-up on West 132nd, just west of Broadway.

The city foreclosed on the building in 1978 because of unpaid taxes. Since then, it has promised the tenants several times that they would be able to purchase their apartments for $250 each as part of a low-income co-op, if they showed they could manage it themselves, said Ms. Henriquez, a retired assistant preschool teacher.

Then, in 2003, Columbia began discussing plans for a new campus. In the end, Columbia agreed to put up the new building with “equal or better housing” for displaced tenants on a site it purchased in 2008. Residents are to move in this spring.

The building will provide 42 affordable apartments, with rooftop patios for tenants with views from the George Washington Bridge to Midtown skyscrapers. Some laundry rooms and meeting rooms have Hudson River views.

Columbia will sell 20 apartments to the tenants of West 132nd, who in turn will set up their own co-
Seven more units will go to former tenants of a second building on Broadway also being displaced by Columbia. The rest will be filled by the city with a housing lottery, a city spokeswoman said.

The tenants at West 132nd Street named their new co-op the Exodus Housing Development Fund Corp., reflecting their long journey toward home ownership. The building will also have retail space to be retained by Columbia, and a new home for the Meeting with God Pentecostal Church displaced from West 130th Street by the Columbia project.

“We were waiting for many years, looking for a new location, and finally God opened the door through Columbia University,” said Rev. Henry Mercado, the church’s pastor, after it relocated to a temporary space in 2009.

Isabel Rodriguez, a partner at Solomon & Bernstein, represented the tenants along with partner Joel Bernstein. They credited the tenants with holding their building together during decades when many other uptown buildings deteriorated or were abandoned.

Ms. Muentes moved into the West 132nd Street building in 1968. A few years later, an uncle, Arturo, purchased it for about $1,300 a unit. After he died in 1975, Ms. Muentes said her husband took over the building and stayed on as superintendent after the city foreclosed.

Columbia will cover most cost increases over the next 15 years to keep maintenance and rents low, provide reserve funds for both co-ops, and pay $7,000 to cover relocation costs, plus $2,000 for tenants who use their own movers.

The building was designed by Magnusson Architecture & Planning, a firm with extensive experience with cost-conscious affordable housing. Since the scaffolding came down, the building has faced some criticism.

It includes yellow, beige, black, red and blue brick, and an irregular pattern of windows, that several architects and preservationists said is largely disconnected from the century-old brick buildings with terra-cotta trim that line nearby sections of Broadway.

“Is it a good-faith effort by Columbia,” said Andrew Dolkart, director of the Historic Preservation Program at Columbia. “They are sticking to the deal they made.”

But he said the building looks like “affordable housing” without context. “You see that a lot in the Bronx, in neighborhoods where there isn’t that much context.”

Ms. Rodriguez disagreed. “They didn’t build Versailles but they built a beautiful building that fits with the architecture of New York,” she said. “The roof deck is gorgeous.”

Nineteen families that had previously resided in a New York City Housing Preservation and Development (HPD)-owned building on W. 132nd Street in Manhattanville became co-op shareholders in a newly constructed 42-unit building in Hamilton Heights. Columbia University welcomed them to their new homes with a warm celebration.
As part of Columbia's commitment to provide equal or better affordable housing for those residents of the two buildings within the Manhattanville Campus expansion area that are part of the city's Tenant-in-Lease (TIL program), the University constructed the new 12-story building at Broadway and West 148th Street. Columbia worked with the residents and other stakeholders to coordinate the relocation of the residents to the new building.

The Hamilton Heights building was built to Enterprise Green Communities guidelines, in support of both community health and the University’s Sustainability Plan. All units in the building have roof deck access, bicycle storage, meeting space, and laundry areas. The landscaped roof terraces provide residents with panoramic views of the Hudson River, the Manhattan skyline, and the George Washington Bridge.

The families moved into their new apartments in December 2016. The issuance of shares in the newly formed co-operative in April 2018 was the culmination of their transition. The new agreement Columbia helped negotiated allowed them to become homeowners sooner than they otherwise would have.

The residents of a second HPD-owned building in Manhattanville are anticipated to relocate to the building in 2018, creating what is expected to be another independent co-op within the new building.
