

Manhattanville in West Harlem Implementation Plan Report
October 15, 2026 Submission

Declaration Reference and Key Data

Obligation Section Number: 5.07(c)(ii)

Obligation Title: Mind Brain Behavior Public Outreach Center

Obligation Page Number: 52

Obligation Trigger: Issuance of TCO for Development Site 2

Obligation Start Date: August 25, 2016

Obligation End Date: 25 Years from Commencement of the Public Outreach Center's Full Operation

Obligation Status: In Compliance

Obligation

Mind Brain Behavior Public Outreach Center. CU shall locate within Development Site 2 (the proposed Jerome L. Greene Science Center) a Screening and Education Center for community outreach. The purpose of the Center shall be to provide stroke awareness lectures and free blood pressure and cholesterol screenings. The Center shall commence operation upon issuance of the temporary certificate of occupancy for the Jerome L. Greene Science Center and operate for a 25-year period from commencement of full operation.

*The center opened to the public in September 2017. Therefore, this obligation will be in effect until 2042, 25 years from the commencement of the center's full operation.

Innovation; Changed Conditions

Columbia University's Wellness Center opened in the Jerome L. Greene Science Center in 2017 and has since provided health education, community resources and free health screenings to the West Harlem community, as well as trained members of the Harlem community to become advocates to prevent stroke and mental health through the Institute for Training Outreach and Community Health (InTOUCH) and Mental Health First Aid (MHFA) programs. The success of this training led to the expansion of the Center's focus to building capacity in the community, by training individuals from faith and community-based organizations (CBO) to be certified community health workers.

In 2023, upgrades were made to the Wellness Center model to focus on Community Health Worker (CHW) training and the center was renamed to "Columbia Center for Community Health". Under the center's supervision, these CHWs continue to provide stroke awareness lectures, free blood pressure, and cholesterol screenings, but with the evidence driven framework of meeting people where they are. Screenings are largely performed off-site, at local faith and community-based organizations or at community-focused health events. The Center continues to operate in the Jerome L. Greene Science Center as a screening and education center focused on stroke awareness and free blood pressure and cholesterol screenings.

COLUMBIA | Wellness Center

Located in Columbia University's new Jerome L. Greene Science Center in West Harlem

The Wellness Center provides free blood pressure readings, cholesterol screening and A1C glucose testing to the community. Visitors will receive a record of their results, as well as information on ways they can improve their health.

On request, Wellness Center staff will provide information about free and low-cost health care available throughout Harlem and upper Manhattan. The Wellness Center will also provide onsite assistance with health insurance enrollment.

In addition to providing free blood pressure and cholesterol screening, the Wellness Center is home to two programs dedicated to empowering the community through health education.

The Mental Health First Aid (MHFA) program is dedicated to improving access to quality mental health in Harlem. The program teaches participants the warning signs of mental health problems, helps build an understanding of the importance of early intervention and seeking support. Information about support groups, tools for mental health, and local resources will be provided.

The Institute for Training Outreach and Community Health (InTOuCH) is a free community-based program designed to raise awareness about stroke and heart attack prevention. Through its rigorous training program, InTOuCH participants commit to serving the community as volunteer health workers and as counselors at Columbia's Wellness Center and local screening events.

Annual Report: Mind Brain Behavior Public Outreach Center (Columbia Center for Community Health)

State Submission Annual Reporting Period: October 2025 - September 2026

The Columbia Center for Community Health (CCCH) operates out of the Jerome L. Greene Science Center and provides health education, community resources and free health screenings to the West Harlem community, and trains members of the Harlem community to become advocates to prevent stroke and mental health through the Institute for Training Outreach and Community Health (InTOuCH) and Mental Health First Aid (MHFA) programs.

The CCCH is committed to certifying and training community health workers (CHWs) and positively impacting the health of the Uptown community. Through community capacity building and health promotion, the CCCH is dedicated to supporting and empowering the local community.

Leading the CCCH are co-directors Dr. Olajide Williams, a distinguished neurologist, and Dr. Robert Fullilove, a public health expert, both renowned for their pioneering approaches to improving public health in Harlem and Washington Heights. Under their leadership, the training and certification of CHWs has become central to the CCCH's mission, reflecting the critical role these frontline workers play in healthcare. Under the center's supervision, these CHWs provide stroke awareness lectures, free blood pressure, and cholesterol screenings. Screenings are often performed off-site at local faith and community-based organizations or at community-focused health events (see attached report for more information). The Center continues to operate in the Jerome L. Greene Science Center as a screening and education center focused on stroke awareness and free blood pressure and cholesterol screenings.

Please note: The Columbia Center for Community Health is not a clinical practice.

Stroke Awareness

The Columbia Center for Community Health houses the Community Health Worker Stroke Prevention program, which empowers communities to combat stroke. The program includes 6-week trainings, held throughout the year that provide local residents with the tools they need to become community health workers. Volunteers learn about various cardiovascular health topics, including motivational interviewing, with a special emphasis on stroke and related risk factors.

Alumni of the program serve as health advocates in their communities and at faith-based organizations, with the overall goal of improving stroke outcomes and lowering the prevalence of stroke and related risk factors. The curriculum was developed with the assistance of community focus groups and in consultation with experts in health education. The program, modeled on the Center for Disease Control and Prevention's CHW training curriculum, with the addition of culturally tailored multimedia components, is led by Olajide Williams, MD, chief of staff of neurology and associate professor of neurology at Columbia University Medical Center, founder of Hip Hop Public Health, and codirector of the Center for Stroke Disparities Solutions in New York.

HISTORY & MISSION

A Decade of Community Health in Action

The Columbia Center for Community Health (CCCH), located within Columbia University's Zuckerman Institute, advances community health through workforce training, health education, screening, outreach, and research. In 2025-2026, CCCH marked a major milestone: ten years of the Institute for Training, Outreach and Community Health (InTOuCH), the Center's community health worker training program.

InTOuCH began in 2016 with a small cohort of community leaders. By 2026, the program had completed 21 cohorts and built a growing alumni network working across community settings, healthcare organizations, public agencies, and research programs.

326 CHWs trained & certified since inception	33 New CHWs trained in Cohorts 20 & 21	56 Alumni recertified	201 Continued health education attendances
26 Community health fairs	438 Community members screened	513 Center-based BP & cholesterol screenings	126 Guests at the 10th anniversary celebration

InTOuCH began in 2016 with a small cohort of community leaders. By 2026, the program had completed 21 cohorts and built a growing alumni network working across community settings, healthcare organizations, public agencies, and research programs.

What InTOuCH does

Prepare community health workers to deliver health education, screenings, counseling, and navigation support.

Build knowledge, skills and self-efficacy for chronic disease prevention and community outreach.

Create pathways for alumni to continue learning and contribute to research and community-based programs.

How CCCH works

Partners with faith-based and community organizations, public agencies, health systems, and Columbia faculty.

Offers community screenings and health education in neighborhood settings and at the Center.

Connects training, outreach, and research so community expertise is embedded in program delivery.

MAY 28, 2026

Celebrating 10 Years of InTOuCH

CCCH marked InTOuCH's tenth anniversary with a symposium and celebration bringing together community health workers, alumni, Columbia colleagues, community partners, and supporters. Total attendance was 126, including 62 community health workers.

Moderated by Dr. Williams, the panel discussed the personal impact of CHW training, workforce development, integration of CHWs into clinical practice, community-level impact, policy considerations, and the future of the workforce. The program also included CHW recognition led by Dr. Janhavi Mallaiah and closing remarks from Dr. Robert Fullilove.

STRENGTHENING THE MODEL

Curriculum & Research

CURRICULUM DEVELOPMENT

The revised InTOuCH CHW curriculum moved into its final development phase.

The curriculum was updated to support consistent, structured training for a lay community health workforce.

A new alcohol-use module was added in response to updated public health guidance on alcohol-related health risks.

CHURCH TRIAL PROGRESS

123 participants enrolled

117 baseline assessments completed

65 six-month assessments completed

23 twelve-month final assessments completed

InTOuCH alumni also continued to contribute to the Center's research model, where CHWs can support participant engagement, screening, motivational interviewing, and linkage to services. This approach keeps community expertise central to how research is implemented.

2026 AND BEYOND

Looking Ahead: The Next Decade

The tenth anniversary also provided an opportunity to define the next phase of InTOuCH. Priorities identified for the coming years focus on extending access, strengthening standardization, and building sustainable pathways for CHW development.

01Expand digital access

Develop an asynchronous version of the CHW training so the program can reach learners beyond New York City.

02Share a standardized model

Publish and disseminate the revised curriculum and training approach for adaptation by other organizations.

03Deepen social-care integration

Strengthening training related to social risk factors and community resource navigation as CHW roles continue to expand.

04Advance professional pathways

Continue exploring a Columbia-based executive certification pathway for community health workers.
