Athletics Clinics. Commencing in May 20, 2009, CU's varsity sports programs and coaches of football, volleyball, basketball, soccer, swimming, track and field and tennis shall sponsor and participate in seasonal sports clinics for local community children between the ages of 5 and 13 in Columbia's facilities and throughout Harlem and Washington Heights, until 2033 or for a period of 25 years from actual commencement, whichever is longer.

Innovation; Changed Conditions

Columbia University hosts a variety of sports clinics and camps throughout the year for children at its NCAA Division 1 athletic facilities built for collegiate and professional competitions in Morningside Heights and Inwood in northern Manhattan. Clinic and camp participants develop skills by receiving instruction from NCAA Division 1 coaches, professional athletes, collegiate student-athletes, physical education teachers, and other educators. All clinics and camps are open to any and all entrants, and are limited only by the specified number, gender, age, or grade levels of each camp.

To keep costs as low as possible, clinics and camps are offered at CU facilities so there are no additional facilities fees. Additionally, the eligible age range has been expanded from nine (ages 5 to 13) to thirteen (ages 6 to 18) due to a variety of factors, including keeping costs low based on required supervision ratios, the strengths of available programming and the interest in serving a greater number of local community children. Clinics and camps are provided at cost and are advertised by individual coaches to the community in a variety of ways, including the Columbia Athletics website, coach websites, newsletters, social media posts, and local media. The Columbia Athletics department also participates in local school events such as silent auctions to promote camps and clinics.
